

A good word
for our 4500
people...

DEDICATED.

Many of the jobs are dirty or dangerous. But they're vital.

Generating electricity is a 24-hour-a-day matter. Since there's no way to store power, it must be generated at the moment it's needed. Our people work around the clock to see that you get your power when you want it.

When gales blow down power lines, when lightning strikes a transformer, our emergency crews move on the double. And they're just as willing to work at 3 in the morning as they are in the afternoon.

Weather conditions? Almost always terrible. Bad things don't usually happen when the weather is nice. It makes the emergency jobs unpleasant—and very hazardous.

Most outages are taken care of so quickly they're scarcely noticed. And our local system reliability is 99.95 percent.

This is why we know dedication is the rule and not the exception at Utah Power. We want you to know you've got some special people on your side, moving power down the line.

They merit a good word.

time. Most of the time nothing is wrong with the child and we spend our time talking about preventing problems. (Personally, I think that's enough to make well child visits worth the money!) When there IS something wrong both the time and money are more than worth it. Most doctors provide well child services and most of us are willing to work with families who need time to pay bills. Wasatch County now has a well baby clinic where the charge is adjusted according to income and family size. It is held on Friday mornings and you can make appointments and get more information by calling 654-2700. Local doctors do the exams. So you see, there is no longer any excuse for not getting routine well child check-ups for all children. EVERYONE can now afford it and NO ONE can afford to take chances with their child's future.

Well Child Clinics

Well Child Clinics are now available for children up to age six at the Wasatch City-County Health Department located at 55 West Center in Heber.

There are two morning clinics and two afternoon clinics each month. These clinics are held on Fridays and a prior appointment is necessary. Fees are based on family number and income. It is

Republicans in this area agree:

There is No Substitute for Experience.

State legislators, Republican state delegates, and community leaders all over Utah agree: There is no substitute for experience, especially when it comes to Utah's $2.4 billion budget.

Resources are scarce. And the candidates who are best qualified to balance the needs of the state with the ability of taxpayers to pay are Norm Bangerter and Val Oveson.

For ten years, Bangerter has worked hard in the state legislature to do just that—eight of those years in leadership positions and four of those years as Speaker of the House of Representatives. And, since 1980, Val Oveson has been carefully looking at state spending as State Auditor.

Together, they're prepared to make the most of your tax dollar.

They're prepared for the job.
And more and more Utahns agree.
